

Appreciative Inquiry

Appreciative Inquiry is an affirmative approach which enables transformation by focusing on what gives life and sustainability to an organisation.

AI is being used for a variety of purposes:

- > Strategic planning
- > Diversity training
- > Leadership development
- > Performance enhancement
- > Change management

This presentation will explain why and how this strengths-based inquiry engenders creativity and innovation that brings out the best in people and their organisations.

It is about the best practices and the "next practices" of engaging groups and organisations in the AI process.

The Speaker

John Loty is CEO of LogisticsTraining International and president of ISPI Sydney. His professional background is in negotiation, Industrial Relations, the law (as a barrister, mediator, and arbitrator) and People Management. He has been a General Manager and Corporate Counsel and is now a facilitator and consultant.

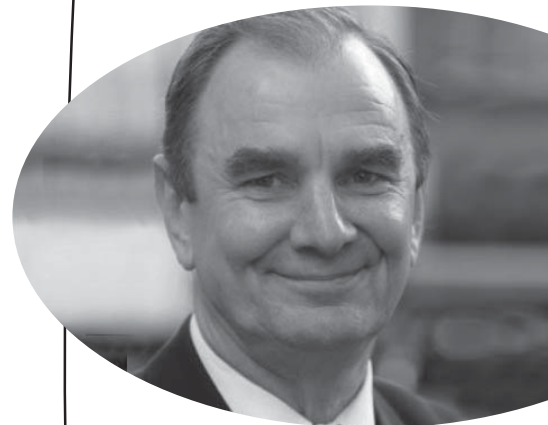

John has become an AI advocate and is largely responsible for the creation of the (Australian) Appreciative Inquiry Network. He was the convenor of the first Australian online Conference (held in April 2005) introducing Appreciative Inquiry to the wider Australian public.

He has a keen interest in all forms of learning and is particularly interested in positive approaches and strengths-focused development.
